Divorce Magazine Spotlights How the Recession is Affecting Divorce and Separation

TORONTO, Canada -- July 16, 2009 – The Summer/Fall 2009 edition of Divorce Magazine (www.DivorceMagazine.com) takes a close look at how the recession is affecting divorce and separation for divorcing couples, divorce lawyers, and other professionals involved in the divorce process.

This timely focus on recession and divorce begins with the feature article “Divorce, Recession Style” that looks at the plummeting economy’s impact on divorce rates, child and spousal support issues, falling matrimonial home equity, do-it-yourself divorce, and more.

The spotlight then extends to a series of Frequently Asked Questions (FAQ) that cover key recession and divorce issues, such as increased marital debt, asset devaluation, living together during separation due to financial restraints, avoiding costly litigation, and more. These questions are answered clearly and in an accessible, practical manner by divorce lawyers, forensic accountants, financial planners, and other professionals involved in the divorce process.

“The economic turmoil is creating change for everyone and everything involved in the divorce process,” notes Divorce Magazine’s Publisher and CEO Dan Couvrette. “By focusing on these issues in a clear and accessible way, we’re empowering our readers to make smart choices that wisely take into consideration the changing economic situation.”

Complimenting Divorce Magazine’s focus on recession and divorce is other valuable information relevant to divorcing individuals, including advice from Judge Lynn Toler on educating oneself on the law, advice from Judge Roderic Duncan on how to move forward in life during a stressful divorce, common questions children ask during divorce, and more.

The Summer/Fall 2009 issue of Divorce Magazine will be available in mid July, 2009. Additionally, Divorce Magazine’s knowledge center containing a wide range of divorce-related articles, news items and other resources are available online at www.DivorceMagazine.com (free access and no registration required).
